Course Description

During this semester we will explore aspects of the continuing diversification of civilization in parts of Asia, Africa and Europe. Interrelationships among the religions of the Book (Judaism, Christianity and Islam) as well as humanistic perspectives are considered from historical, artistic, philosophical and literary perspectives. The rise of new social and political institutions is explained in terms of cultural, economic and other value shifts during the era traditionally called the Middle Ages. The movements of people and their cultural boundaries motivate also the re-thinking of arts and ideas; the Renaissance concludes this semester.

Assignments and Grading Policy

This course requires a significant amount of reading. Students are asked to read each scheduled assignment prior to coming to class. This means that the readings listed by date on the reading assignment schedule are to be read before the day those readings are listed. This also means that students are to strive to understand the readings as well, not merely go through the motions of poring over pages. Since the readings are often challenging, they should also be a source of questions to keep in mind while listening to lecture, and to ask about during seminar. Expect to spend approximately four to six hours per week in doing only the readings for this course. It is not possible to work effectively in this course if one were to rely on the lectures and class discussions alone. A variety of writing assignments will be assigned for this course, and they will differ among instructors, but all instructors will assign topics that meet the writing requirements for the various core areas. Please see the chart in this section for additional information about the specific kinds of written assignments you will be asked to accomplish. Students will also be asked to complete a lecture mid term examination, and final examinations for both the lecture portion of the class as well as the seminar portion. Students will also be required to complete one speech each semester. The specific guidelines for each semester's speech are to be found in the Humanities Reader <http://www.sjsu.edu/people/cynthia.rostankowski/courses/1B/>

In Humanities 1B, one speech will again be required, and will be graded. As indicated by Professor Hinerman in his Handbook, this semester you will be asked to present a five minute "exegetical" speech. The exegetical speech arises from the early church. It is the form used by Augustine, and in Augustine's time, there was a constant level of concern that the presenter of a speech (whether a bishop or church elder) do an adequate job explaining the texts of the Bible to the audience. Since many in the congregation had a limited knowledge of traditions from the Hebrew Bible, and of how to apply the New Testament message to their everyday lives, the speechmaker's interpretation of what the biblical text "really meant" was very important to the average Christian who wished to live a "biblical/ethical" lifestyle.

Written Assignments

In order to assure the most effective learning experience for you the student, your professor is required to assess the ways you have mastered the materials comprising the various components of the course. 'Assessment' means nothing more than gathering information about your learning experience, and offering feedback on your expressions of that learning. Some of this information will be used to assign grades to your work, and some is used to suggest ways that the course can become more beneficial and effective in meeting your learning needs. The university requires that professors explain and justify their assessment methods, and so enable your best understanding of what will be asked of you.

Your written assignments for this course are listed in the table below. Some are indicated as “required,” that is, they must be completed and turned in to your instructor in order for it to be possible for you pass the course (although completing them is, of course, no guarantee of passing). Other assignments are indicated as both “required and rewritable” and are both required and may be re-written so you may have the opportunity to improve your work. As in the past two semesters, you will be required to present a speech, and you must turn in an outline for your speech on the day of your presentation. More details about the speech requirement are to be found in your speech assignment described in your IB Reader. Although completing journal assignments is not required, it will be difficult to succeed well in class without accomplishing them, since they are based upon the scheduled readings, and their evaluative worth may become pivotal in determining your end-of-semester grade. Failure to complete and turn in a journal in a timely way will be recorded as an “F” for that work. Due dates for journals will be listed in the journal handout.

Please note that the professor may change any of the following information for the benefit of the class, should the need arise. Any change will be announced in class, and via MySJSU, if necessary.

All coursework will be evaluated in terms of letter grades A+ through F, with the values of the letter grades as follows:

Chart of Grades

A+ = 4.3	A = 4.0	A- = 3.7
B+ = 3.3	B = 3.0	B- = 2.7
C+ = 2.3	C = 2.0	C- = 1.7
D+ = 1.3	D = 1.0	D- = 0.7

Classroom Protocol

Each person is of intrinsic worth and is thus worthy of respect in all interactions; please keep this awareness at the forefront of your considerations as you enter and exit your lecture and seminar classrooms, and as you comport yourself in those classes (and in all of your other classes as well). Treat guests with respect and courtesy. Respectful behavior includes silence when others are speaking, entering the room quietly and inconspicuously, leaving the room during session only as a matter of greatest urgency, being attentive to the class in progress, raising your hand if you wish to be acknowledged, and refraining from all other interactions (personal and electronic) while class is going on. This specifically includes refraining from cell phone use in any way during class, and engaging in the use of your computer only for note-taking and electronic text reference.

Electronic Devices Policy

To help foster the best possible learning environment for yourself and those around you, please avoid doing anything in class that might distract the attention of others. Mobile technology can be especially disruptive. During lectures, portable electronic devices may be used only for class-related purposes such as taking notes; otherwise, they must be turned off. During seminars, portable electronic devices may only be used in accordance with your seminar instructor's guidelines. During examinations, portable electronic devices may never be used (except under supervision at the Disability Resource Center).
