Technology Industry Collaboration Initiative

Introduction

The main goal of this project is to explore opportunities in, and possibilities of reaching, Silicon Valley Manufacturing and Computer/Electronics Industries to seek their support for the Industrial Technology programs at San Jose State University. The idea is to implement a rather permanent, standard system and process that will make it easy to maintain a good symbiotic relationship with related Silicon Valley companies for supporting the Industrial Technology programs at San Jose State University. This is especially important for the future expected growth of Industrial Technology programs. The expected key areas of support will include technical, equipment, financial, and programs of the department. This effort also supports the college's strategic priorities in strengthening industry and community partnerships.

A case can be made that since San Jose Silicon Valley area is full of rich companies who can help our programs, it is expected that the result of this project can serve as a rich database for faculty, students and others to find important information about companies with key resources that can support Industrial Technology programs. Also, while the project will help to identify companies to request help from, it can also assist in locating companies that may use our services and products, as well as assist in locating companies who can do collaborative work with us. The opportunities in this type of project are almost endless.

The manufacturing and computer/electronics companies of interest in this study are contained in the San Jose Silicon Valley Chamber of Commerce located at: <http://web.sjchamber.com/search>. This group is Silicon Valley's largest Chamber of Commerce, representing the Silicon Valley region's businesses. The San Jose Silicon Valley Chamber of Commerce is called Silicon Valley Organization (SVO) and represents more than 1,400 businesses and 300,000 employees throughout the greater Silicon Valley region. The SVO's mission is to create a strong local economy, provide premier business connections and visibility, represent the interests of business to government, promote the community, and initiate political and community action. Their member investors are made up of small businesses as well as the largest employers of the Valley. Together, they work towards making Silicon Valley the first choice for business location, relocation and expansion. Their objectives relate to our Technology programs interests are to:

1. Network and connect their member businesses
2. Advocate on behalf of their member businesses
3. Advance a solutions-based business retention, expansion and recruitment strategy
4. Promote and brand the region
5. Drive education and workforce advancement strategies
6. Drive and recognize business and community leadership
7. Encourage and practice volunteerism and philanthropy
8. Support the election of pro-business minded candidates to elected office

Scope of Work

The present work was limited to Technology-related companies within the San Jose city limit who were registered with the San Jose City Chamber of Commerce. Future efforts may expand the study to include all Silicon Valley Technology-related companies here and beyond. This work was also limited to the available time during the summer of 2018. It is estimated that the framework will be established this summer, and some outreach efforts made.

Potential Uses for this Project:

This project can be used in various important ways. The broad idea was to create a database which will help faculty and students to know which companies can assist with any of our needs and resources for helping our programs. But as the work progressed, more uses for the work emerged. The following uses have, therefore, been identified for this project:

1. Faculty can use it to determine which companies to approach for equipment, software, materials and tooling donation request.
2. Faculty can use it to determine which companies to undertake collaborative research work with based on their areas of specialties.
3. Faculty can use it to determine which companies to approach for consultation based on the expertise of the companies.
4. Technology faculty can use it to request donations to support scholarship monies.
5. Faculty and students can use it to look for grants for various needed opportunities.
6. Faculty and students can use it for networking opportunities in the companies.
7. Faculty and students can use it to determine which companies to approach for possible internship opportunities.
8. Students can use it to determine which companies to approach for possible job opportunities.
9. Career Center can use it to select, invite, and involve more local Technology-related companies to SJSU's career expos.
10. Faculty can use it to identify qualified company personnel who can serve on our Technology Industry Advisory Board.
11. Technology department can use it to identify technology-related companies which can sponsor senior projects.
12. Some of this information can be used by, or shared with, other SJSU departments.
13. This information can be published on our department's web site for easy access by everyone.

Observed Characteristics of the Selected Silicon Valley Organizations

The companies selected in this project were all registered with the San Jose Silicon Valley Chamber of Commerce. It should be noted that, for one reason or the other, many other companies did not register with this chamber, and therefore, were not selected in the project. It was practically impossible to determine the number of the companies that did not register with San Jose Silicon Valley Chamber of Commerce.

However, some observations were made in the process of selecting and building up the database of the registered companies. These observations are referred to as characteristics of these companies and are enumerated here.

1. Some key companies did not register with the San Jose Chamber of Commerce and, therefore, were not included in this work. It is rather disappointing that some major companies like Tesla Motors and Jablin, Inc. were, for one reason or another, not listed in the San Jose Chamber of Commerce list of registered companies.
2. Some companies may not be technology related after all. The selection process might have been poorly done.
3. It is possible that some addresses and phone numbers may have changed due to the rather dynamic mobility of Silicon Valley companies.
4. Company contacts are difficult to locate or not available. It was the original intent of this work to retrieve company contact personnel and email information. But it was found to be a very difficult or impossible process during the work, so that idea was abandoned altogether.
5. It is clear that this work may have selected more companies than needed in this first study. Future studies should remove weak companies to reduce the size.
6. This work can be regarded as a pilot work. If successful, then future work can build on it.
7. Some companies may have been repeated do to classification issues.
8. Technology-related topics are scattered into various of these industry groups.
9. Some of the companies are located outside of San Jose region even though they are registered with the San Jose Silicon Valley. This may be because business activity type may dictate where a company registers.
10. The companies that more closely relate to Technology can easily be identified by following the industry type headings used to group the companies which are attached to this report.
11. This work should be regarded as a miniature sample of companies that represent the whole Silicon Valley companies.
12. Even outside companies would register with San Jose Chamber of Commerce to extend/expand their business reaches and to tap from local needs and resources here.
13. Some companies may be too small to offer any significant help. It appeared some of these businesses registered with San Jose Silicon Valley Chamber of Commerce to, in part, advertise themselves.
14. Some businesses like auto repair shops were included. These are not typically Technology-related companies.

How the Project Was Accomplished

The method employed involved a careful break-up and analysis of the selected industry groups to retrieve the companies in each group. A database of selected key San Jose-based Silicon Valley manufacturing and computer/electronics-related entities were created for compiling their names, company profiles and contact information. This database will help to identify each company's products and/or services which will be used to direct specific request needs to specific companies.

A comprehensive report of the steps and methods used to do the project was prepared. The report included comprehensive report of the steps employed, standard letter of request templates developed to facilitate future use by Technology faculty in making industry contacts during their requests, a compilation of Technology needs, and a database of companies with their contact information.

The process of this project was broken into four major steps. Each step involved several sub-steps to accomplish it. This section identifies the four steps and shows the details of what was done in each of them.

Step 1: Identified Needs in Technology Programs

This step involved identifying the present and future technical, equipment, financial, and programmatic needs of Industrial Technology programs at San Jose State University.

This involves two major steps:

1. Sending email requests and personally talking to and interviewing Technology programs faculty and retrieving the needed information from them. Some of them responded and gave me their list of what they felt would be needed. I am hoping that others will provide their lists as this stage is an ongoing effort.
2. Their feedback resulted in a compilation of a comprehensive list of technical, equipment, programmatic, and financial needs of Industrial Technology programs. While this section is a continual process, the current list can be updated any time. The compiled list of all that was submitted from the faculty is shown in Appendix A.

Step 2: Determining and Preparing a Database of Technology-Related Companies In the San Jose Silicon Valley Area

This step involved determining the manufacturing and computer/electronics-related companies of interest. To accomplish this, the following steps were taken:

1. Several sources, including publications like Design 2 Shop list of companies manual, the Internet, and Google searches were undertaken to determine the most ideal source that contained the kind of Technology-related companies needed for this project.
2. It was decided that companies that are based in the San Jose area of Silicon Valley would be used in the study, to reduce the amount of workload because of the sheer number of companies in the Silicon Valley.
3. It was determined that San Jose Silicon Valley Chamber of Commerce would be a good source of information on the companies of interest.
4. It was also decided to use all the registered Technology-related companies in the San Jose Silicon Valley Chamber of Commerce to reduce the scope of the project. These companies of interest are contained in the San Jose Silicon Valley Chamber of Commerce website located at: <http://web.sjchamber.com/search>. The registered businesses are grouped according to their industry functions.

5. All 90 industry groups listed in the site were downloaded and blind reviewed. The researcher removed any group whose name does not reflect or relate to Technology.
6. 55 of these 90 groups were identified as somehow relating to manufacturing and computer/electronics, and were therefore used in this project. These 55 groups of industries are attached to this report as Appendix B.
7. Each of the groups was further broken up and each of their respective companies (name, address, and phone number) painstakingly copied to build a database of information.
8. Altogether, the database contained 784 companies or businesses. The database has industry groups, company names, phone numbers, and mailing addresses. (See Appendix C).

Step 3: Preparing Letters of Request Templates

This step involved preparation of five different letter of request templates which can be used by faculty, staff and students to make requests to the identified companies. The letters are drafted differently for each need area and are attached in Appendix D. The following need areas are respectively represented in these letters:

1. Letter for equipment request.
2. Letter for research collaboration request.
3. Letter for grant request.
4. Letter for internship request.
5. Letter for scholarship request.

It is noted here that these letter request areas can be increased as more need emerge or are identified. Industrial Technology is a very broad field of study. As such, its needs are broad and many.

Step 4: Mailing Sample Letters to Selected Companies

A pilot test of this idea was conducted at the end of the project. The test was conducted in the following order:

1. Ten (10) letters of request were mailed to 10 different Technology-related companies that were rather randomly selected from the study database. Two letters addressed each of the identified need areas of the Technology programs, one for manufacturing and one for Computer Network Systems Management. The areas addressed were equipment request, collaborative work inquiry, grant request, internship inquiry, and scholarship request.
2. Several follow-up phone calls will be made to non-responding companies after one or two weeks of mailing the letters.
3. If successful, the results (in the forms of donations, agreement etc.) will be shared with the faculty of the Technology programs.
4. This process of making any kind of request has pretty much been standardized for Technology faculty to use in future such efforts. As stated in the recommendation section, future efforts may expand the study to include all Silicon Valley manufacturing and computer/electronics-related companies.

Recommendations

This project can be regarded as a pilot work. If successful, then future work can build on it, and improve on the mistakes that have been made. The following recommendations are made based on the observations already made from this work:

1. It is recommended to narrow down the selection of Technology companies, to weed out the ones with little or no technology content. The selection process used in this project was so broad that such companies were selected, resulting in the fact that more companies may have been selected than are needed in this first study. Future studies should remove weak companies to reduce the size.
2. While the current project will help to identify companies to request help from, the project can also assist in locating companies that may use our services and products. It is recommended that this idea be considered for future projects.
3. This project actually involved only a miniature sample of companies that represent the whole Silicon Valley companies. It is recommended that a larger project involving all the companies in the larger Silicon Valley be conducted. Such a project will provide more useful information for Technology programs and also for the college and the university.
4. Structure the process to help faculty know which area of equipment request to direct grant proposals and letters of request for equipment support.
5. The list of companies is now standardized (and will continue to be improved) for future internship opportunities.
6. Make a professional presentation at a national conference to teach others the techniques employed.
7. It is also recommended to write and publish this process in a professional journal to teach others the techniques employed.
8. It is recommended to keep a record of all the cooperating companies and develop future relationships with them. A database of such companies should be developed so that they can be invited to Technology professional events, and their senior employees selected to serve on Technology Industry Advisory Board.
9. Since some of the major companies like Tesla Motors and Jablin, Inc. were not listed in the San Jose Chamber of Commerce list of registered companies, it is recommended that such companies be identified and added by the department, to make the database a more functional informational source material.
10. System may be of help to other SJSU programs.

Dear Human Resources Personnel:

RE: Internship Program Request

Please direct this letter to your correct company officials if you are not the persons to receive this information.

My name is Dr. _____ and I am a professor in the Department of Aviation and Technology at San Jose State University. I teach courses and do research work in the Industrial Technology programs of the department. The Industrial Technology programs prepare our students for technical management careers in Business and Industry where they work with high tech companies like yours. To keep up with these challenges, the faculty tries to be on the cutting edge of technology by trying to associate with these Silicon Valley companies in various areas of needs much of which comes through industrial internships.

My department is exploring the possibility of establishing an internship program with your company in which our Industrial Technology Program majors at San Jose State University can do their internships at your company. This letter is to explore that possibility and opportunity. We have some very promising candidates who want to be placed at the moment. Would your company be interested in assisting us by providing internship opportunities to these students?

Thank you so much for taking the time to look at this my request. I can be reached at the following phone number and email address should you need to contact me: _____, email _____ . I look forward to hearing from you.

Sincerely Yours:

Dr. _____

RE: Scholarship Program Request

Please direct this letter to your correct company officials if you are not the persons to receive this information.

My name is Dr. _____ and I am a professor in the Department of Aviation and Technology at San Jose State University. The Industrial Technology programs prepare our students for technical management careers in Business and Industry where they work with high tech companies like yours. To keep up with these challenges, the faculty tries to be on the cutting edge of technology by trying to associate with these Silicon Valley companies in various areas of needs, much of which comes through equipping our students with the best possible education available to us. My department is exploring the possibility of establishing several scholarships to help support our growing number of students.

This letter is to ask your company to consider supporting our students through scholarships. We have a number of students who can use the financial support that scholarships can provide. The scholarships can be established in your company's name through our SJSU Foundation. We would be highly honored if your company can consider this a worthwhile expenditure that can affect the future of some of our needy students.

Thank you so much for taking the time to look at this my request. I can be reached at the following phone number and email address should you need to contact me: _____, email _____ . I look forward to hearing from you.

My name is Dr. _____ and I am a professor in the Department of Aviation and Technology at San Jose State University. The Industrial Technology programs prepare our students for technical management careers in Business and Industry where they work with high tech companies like yours. To keep up with these challenges, the faculty tries to be on the cutting edge of technology by trying to associate with these Silicon Valley companies in various areas of needs, much of which comes through equipping our students with the best possible education available to us. My department is exploring the possibility of obtaining specific grants to help support our growing number of students.

This letter is to ask your company to consider supporting our students through grants for the purchase/support/sponsor/ for _____. The grant can be established in your company's name through our SJSU Foundation who manages such gifts to us. We would be highly honored if your company can consider this a worthwhile expenditure that can affect the future of some of our needy students.

Thank you so much for taking the time to look at this my request. I can be reached at the following phone number and email address should you need to contact me: _____, email _____ . I look forward to hearing from you.

Sincerely Yours:

Dr. _____
